Arcturis project BaratHaven Park at Dardenne Greenway garners two planning awards

St. Louis, MO, December 17, 2007..... BaratHaven Park at Dardenne Greenway, a project completed by Arcturis, a St. Louis planning, architecture and design firm, received planning awards from the National Recreation and Park Association – Great Lakes Region and East-West Gateway Council of Governments.

BaratHaven is a 165-acre master plan community featuring residential and commercial areas, as well as Barat Academy, a private, independent faith-based high school that opened in fall 2007. The new park and greenway trail at BaratHaven was developed as a public-private partnership between the Great Rivers Greenway District, McEagle Properties LLC, Barat Academy, Vantage Homes, Hayden Homes and the City of Dardenne Prairie. Arcturis led the master planning, landscape architecture and design efforts for the project.

The National Recreation and Park Association’s award recognizes the Great Rivers Greenway District’s leadership in developing the park and the first three miles of trail along the Dardenne Greenway at BaratHaven. The project received the Partnership Award from the NRPA and it exemplifies how individual components developed through a partnership enhance each other.

The East-West Gateway award program recognizes outstanding local government achievements in the St. Louis region and the award was given under the category of the Leadership in Planning and Design Innovation for the design of the park.
